Instructional Methods and Activities

This Web course utilizes a combination of power point presentations, readings, experiential activities case studies, videos, research papers, and class discussions. For this process to be successful, each student must participate fully by reading assigned materials, logging onto Moodle at least twice weekly, and participating in class exercises and discussions. The instructional philosophy for the current course and the primary textbook is based on a learning-centered, outcome-based approach, which is briefly summarized below:

Learning Centered. A cross-disciplinary, constructivist pedagogical model, learning- or learner-centered education refers to designing educational curricula that focus on promoting active student learning of specific skills and knowledge rather than mastery of content. In this approach, learning is the focus of curriculum design. Student learning is frequently measured to determine whether students are meaningfully engaging the material and applying the information to case studies. Students are active in this process, applying and using knowledge rather than trying to memorize or analyze it. Clearly defined learning objectives and criteria are used to facilitate student learning and democratized the student-teacher relationship. In this course, students will be learning information using experiential activities to enhance understanding and application.

Outcome-Based: Closely related to learning-centered, outcome-based learning refers to designing curriculum around the final learning outcomes or objectives. Rather than simply following the textbook chapter by chapter, the learning objectives drive the curriculum. In the case of this course, the learning objectives focus on learning aspects of theory that are relevant to everyday practice. Thus, learning is measured through experiential activities and outcome measures.
